  - a. Assume that present responsibilities would be carried on in the event of emergency as amended by any special missions that may be assigned in the case of emergency. In turn, that plans based on these responsibilities would have to be amended from time to time as appropriate to reflect any change in eas missions assigned to the Agency. In other words, "It was not the responsibility of the Committee to engage in war planning."
  - b. That emphasis should be placed on the functions that would have to be carried on during the first ten days of an emergency, assuming that that would be the maximum period during which the group would have to operate without securing support from the personnel surviving in Washington. Beyond this period, it is assumed that additional support can be phased into the operations from a priority basis.

It was agreed that each office would submit a breakdown of its present quota by activities and the number of individuals scheduled to go to perform that activity, classified between professional and clerical. It was further agreed that this group would then meet again to review the appropriateness of the present relationship of these activities among the offices. It may be found that there may be need to readjust the intraoffice activities that would be required to be performed at | 25X1A6d during the emergency period as well as to readjust present quotas among the offices. These quotas were originally allocated largely on the basis of percentage of authorized strength; whereas it may be essential from the functional standpoint that a greater portion of the DD/I quota be made available to OCI and ONE. The over-all Agency review from this functional standpoint may also indicate the need for the DD/I area to have a larger proportion of the 600 total than that presently allocated as compared with the requirements of DD/A. etc. 25X1A9a. the requirements of DD/A, etc. 2000/08/29 : CIA-RD 140060-5
